The property

Higher Holway Farm is a distinguished Grade II Listed farmhouse, believed to date from around 1760, occupying an elevated and private position within the Dorset countryside. Approached via a private driveway of approximately half a mile through its own paddocks, the property enjoys a strong sense of arrival and commands far-reaching views across its surrounding land and the wider landscape beyond.

Over the years, the house has been thoughtfully extended and carefully improved, resulting in a substantial family home that successfully combines period character with the requirements of modern living. The principal accommodation is arranged around a series of well-proportioned reception rooms, many of which enjoy a dual or triple aspect and outlooks across the gardens and countryside. A significant proportion of the ground floor benefits from stone flooring with underfloor heating, providing both practicality and comfort.

The drawing room is particularly impressive. Added as part of a later extension, its triple-aspect design makes the most of the property's elevated setting, allowing natural light to fill the room throughout the day while framing the surrounding views. The reception hall, currently arranged as a family room, provides an equally versatile space and is of a scale that would lend itself to a variety of uses.

Forming the heart of the house is the kitchen and breakfast room, an impressive open-plan space with a vaulted trussed ceiling and direct access to the terrace gardens. The kitchen is centred around a traditional six-oven Aga and substantial wooden island with maple worktop, while a granite-topped breakfast bar subtly separates the preparation area from the informal seating space beyond. There is ample room for dining and relaxed family living, making this a natural gathering place within the house.

The bedroom accommodation is arranged over the upper floors and provides considerable flexibility. The principal suite occupies a private position on the first floor and includes a mirrored dressing area, adjoining bathroom and a further dressing room, which could equally serve as a nursery or study. At the opposite end of the landing is a generous guest suite with its own bathroom and dressing room. The second floor provides three further bedrooms, two bathrooms, one of which is en suite, together with a spacious playroom.

A self-contained two-bedroom annexe is incorporated within the house and benefits from its own independent access, providing excellent ancillary accommodation for guests, extended family or staff.

In addition to the principal house is The Byre, a detached three-bedroom cottage with separate access and parking. Adjoining the cottage is a useful office building comprising two offices, creating an ideal environment for home working or the operation of a small business.

Outside

The gardens and grounds have been carefully developed to complement both the house and its setting. Extensive paved terraces wrap around three sides of the property, interspersed with herbaceous borders and providing a variety of areas for outdoor dining and entertaining. On the southern elevation, the terrace widens to create a particularly attractive entertaining space overlooking the gardens and surrounding countryside.

Beyond the house, a circular lawn extends towards a ha-ha, preserving uninterrupted views across the paddocks beyond. Adjacent to the tennis court is a formal parterre garden designed by Veronica Mackinnon, planted with roses and ornamental shrubs, providing an attractive contrast to the wider landscape. A sheltered courtyard garden accommodates an outdoor swimming pool, framed by traditional stone and timber farm buildings. The pool is surrounded by generous paved terraces, creating a private and sheltered setting for relaxation and entertaining, while remaining entirely in keeping with the character of the wider property.

Complementing the residential accommodation is an extensive range of traditional barns, workshops and stabling, providing excellent ancillary facilities and offering considerable flexibility for equestrian, agricultural, storage or leisure uses. The gardens are enclosed by established hedgerows and merge seamlessly with the surrounding pastureland, creating a notable sense of privacy and cohesion throughout the holding. The paddocks are well suited to equestrian or amenity use and surround the house on all sides, enhancing the property's rural character and setting.

In all, Higher Holway Farm sits in 29.63 acres, comprising formal gardens, paddocks and grazing land, and represents a rare opportunity to acquire a substantial country house in an elevated and private setting within the Dorset countryside.
