About the property

A truly charming stone built character cottage reputed to date back to 1580, detached and distinctive in appearance, and providing surprisingly spacious and versatile living space, approximately 2149 square feet, and occupying a delightful position within highly favoured Castleton, a small hamlet village on the outskirts of Cardiff, perfectly placed within a short driving distance to an exit onto Eastern Avenue, and the M4, enabling fast and economic travel to Cardiff City Centre, Newport and Bristol. This imposing period home includes elegant exposed beamed ceilings, two stone fireplaces including an Inglenook with a stunning Norwegian cast iron log burner and solid wood mantel, farmhouse pine panel doors, and cosy natural stone walls. The property benefits all mains services and lies within the highly popular Bassaleg High School Catchment whilst within walking distance is the charming Village Primary School of Marshfield. The property has been greatly extended Circa 2005, on a two-storey basis, providing very well-designed accommodation, ideal for a family, or perfect for a retire couple seeking space to accommodate grandchildren. The property would also be perfect for a professional couple with ample space to accommodate working from home, and with its versatile design it would also prove of interest to two generation living requirements. Such a great marketplace for so many different types of buyers.
